

AMAN-I-KHAS

Fact Sheet

A wilderness location and a sensitive connection to Rajasthan's history and culture await guests at Aman-i-Khás, an outpost on the threshold of Ranthambore National Park inspired by lavish Mughal hunting parties of old. Each of the ten soaring guest tents is beautifully furnished and assigned a personal butler. In between daily Jeep safaris to catch a glimpse of tigers and other wildlife, guests can enjoy rejuvenating spa treatments or a dip in the traditional stepwell pool, before drinks around a communal firepit and dinners lit by flickering candles under a canopy of stars.

Location

- Aman-i-Khás lies in the Aravalli Hills on the fringes of Ranthambore National Park, in rural Rajasthan

Getting There

- International flights arrive at New Delhi International Airport (DEL). From here, guests can travel four-six hours by train with Aman butler service to Sawai Madhopur, followed by a 20-minute car journey to Aman-i-Khás.
- Alternatively guests can take a one-hour flight from Delhi to Jaipur, followed by a three-hour drive to the property.

Climate

- Average temperatures between October and April peak at 30˚C with overnight lows of 2˚C in December and January
- May and June are summer season, with peak temperatures reaching 40˚C. July, August and September is monsoon season, with sunshine punctuated by heavy downpours and temperatures hovering around 35˚C both day and night.

Aman-i-Khás remains closed between June - September
